THE BALKAN QUESTION

The war began in the Balkans and today the eyes of the world are centered on the Balkans. The most instructive and interesting address in the series on "Europe and the War," at the Congregational church has been reserved until the last. The final address will be given Sunday evening and will be illustrated with 50 stereopticon slides.

The European war cannot be understood until one knows something at least of the eastern question. Bismarck declared in 1870 that the whole eastern question was not worth the bones of a Pomeranian grenadier, yet this very question is in our day costing Germany, Austria, Russia, France and Great Britain multitudes of brave soldiers. The growth of invention, the increase of population, the rapidity of modern mechanical production, the spread of commerce under the present economic system have almost compelled the nations of the earth to seek new markets, new spheres of influence. Where are the nations to find this? It will be found that in one and only one section of the world is there to be found any larger opportunity for new possessions or new spheres of influence. This opportunity presents itself, strangely to say in almost the oldest portion of the world in the decaying Turkish empire. Turkey in Asia is at least the largest section of the world and in many ways the only large section of the world now open to new European influence to development and perhaps possession. The eastern question is thus a western question—the nations of Europe quarrelling, bickering, cheating, lying, stealing, fighting as to who shall possess this last remaining world opportunity for new markets, new influence, new expansion. Germany wants the route from Constantinople to Baghdad and the Persian Gulf. It seems Germany's largest opportunity to develop and colonize Turkey from Constantinople to the Persian Gulf.

Serbia was the first of the strictly Balkan peoples to win independence from the Turks. The Serbian kingdom of which the Serbian still dreams and of which they sing in village gatherings and at their national feasts. The Bulgarian differs in many ways from the Serbian. Formerly the Bulgarians were believed to be Slavs but now it is believed that the Bulgars is sprung from a different race, perhaps Finnish or of kin to the Huns or nearer perhaps to the Turks than any other European race. Politically Bulgaria owes much to the United States. For many years Congressionalists in "America have maintained the famous Roberts college in Constantinople and Bulgarian leaders learned from American teachers deep lessons of the value of independence, the value of education and of character.

The Albanians are among the most interesting races in the Balkans. Albania boasts itself a nation that has never been conquered. Roman legions, Greek troops, Slavie moslem and Gothic hordes have at times made conquests in Albania but have never really possessed the land.

Montenegro like Albania was a portion of ancient Illyria but in the middle ages formed part of the ancient Serbian kingdom. The kingdom of Greece is not usually considered a portion of the Balkan peninsula, nevertheless in the light of modern developments consideration of it cannot be omitted when one studies the Balkan peninsula. Modern Greece is making brave efforts to renew her youth but her deathless age and Greece was the first Moslem possession to win independence from the Turk.

Nearly one-half of the address will describe Turkey, the Turkish people and customs.

Agriculturist Tells How To Pick Turkeys

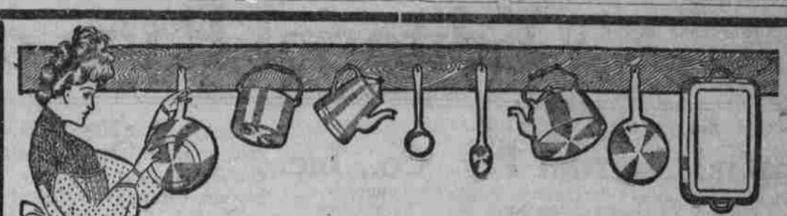

Washington, Nov. 20.—With Thanksgiving day five days distant, the agricultural department has instructed the public how to handle the great national Thanksgiving bird. "Hang the bird by both feet while picking," says a bulletin. "Hanging by one leg spoils its shape. Picking in the lap muddies it up. "Don't kill while the crop is full of food. Feed the bird nothing but water in the 24 hours preceding execution. "Never handle the bird roughly, either before or after death. Rough handling causes bruises and broken bones."

COURT HOUSE NEWS

The case of Armstrong townsite company, which flashed in the pan in 1913 was recalled today in a letter by Mrs. B. N. Garrett to County Clerk Gehlhar asking for the details of the case in that she might use them as evidence against her husband, B. N. Garrett, who was one of the defendants in the case of Francis Feller and Ida Feller against B. N. Garrett and H. H. Hoffman and The Armstrong Townsite company. It appears that Garrett was one of the prime movers in an effort to locate a townsite upon the 200 acre farm of Francis Feller in the northern part of this county. The townsite was laid out on a large sized plan and even included the organization of a bank and the erection of a $300,000 factory. A number of lots and tracts were sold and then Mr. Feller began to fear that no effort would ever be made by the promoters to fulfill their agreements. Mr. Feller had no desire to aid in a fraud and sued for an injunction to prohibit the sale of any more lots. Judge Gallo-way granted the injunction and the townsite company failed and with it went Garrett.

Guest Got Busy Also Got $3,500

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—Two hours after he had taken quarters at the Grand hotel, a man who registered as A. Young, of Santa Rosa, hold up Night Clerk Martin A. Peters and robbed the hotel deposit boxes of $3,500, Peters told the police today.

The robber summoned the only bell-boy on duty to his room and locked the door on him. Proceeding to the office, he leveled a revolver at the clerk and compelled him to surrender the keys to the deposit boxes, which he rifled.

Would Place Ford On the "Unfair" List

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—That Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, should be placed on organized labor's unfair list, was the claim made in a letter from the central labor council of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, to the American Federation of Labor, in convention here.

The Oklahoma communication alleged that Ford is employing an "unfair" construction firm in the erection of a factory at Oklahoma City, and that union carpenters on the job have struck.

A request that Ford be placed on the "unfair" list was referred to a committee.

THE PRESIDENT'S TURKEY.
